COLD IN OVERLAND PRICE OF PROGRESS:

People have been complaining, with reason, about a lack of heat in the Overland Building. What's happening is that the boilers are being altered so that there will be enough heat for the new spaces in the first and second floors when we move into them next semester. The problem is you can't work on a boiler while it's boiling. However, the Vice-president of the contracting company that's doing the work has assured us that in the future, the boilers will be shut down only for short periods at a time. Until the work is complete, the Maintenance Department requests your indulgence and patience.

SCULPTOR DUANE HANSON TO SPEAK AT MASS ART:

The Massachusetts College of Art has invited Sculptor Duane Hanson to present a slide lecture and to participate in an informal critique of selected student work on Dec. 15 at 10:00AM in space 46. Duane Hanson's work consists of explicitly realistic life-size figures whose main impact lies in their sharp commentary on the human condition. The artist has shown extensively in the U.S. as well as in Europe and currently resides and works in Davie, Florida.
